It is reported that Mrs. Bee Little gave her son another thrashing a few days ago. Bee says that he is sure that Mrs. Little's cruelty toward him and other animals about the place would get him divorced; but with Mrs. Little's reputation as a fighter, no judge or jury would dare give him a divorce without giving her a big alimony, which would compel him to go to work.

Hot Cross Buns and Other Recipes.
(By Elizabeth C. Simmons.)
For people who enjoy hot cross buns to consider the history of the little buns, which it is customary to serve at breakfast and tea on Good Friday. From time immemorial cakes of different kinds have been made and eaten to mark special occasions, and the early Christians did not taboo those which had been partaken of according to heathen superstitions.

Hence, the Bunn or Bonn, which was offered in ancient temples as a sacred cake, was taken under the name of religion and marked with its symbol—a cross. It is stated by one writer that Good Friday buns were made from dough from which the Host was taken, and distributed to the people by the clergy.

Most consumers obtain them from the baker's, but as is the case with many other cakes, home-made buns are generally speaking, an improvement on those in ready for the table. The difficulty is in the cooking; the temperature of the oven must be maintained hot and a steady heat maintained. There are two kinds of hot cross buns—saffron and spiced.

For saffron buns mix one ounce and a half of saffron with a little sugar, a pint and a quart of warm milk and water, and as much saffron as is liked. Add a well-beaten egg and three ounces of flour, mixing to a light batter. Set this aside to rise. Rub six ounces of butter into two and a quarter pounds of flour, and the same quantity of raisins. Mix this with the sponge, cover and leave for half an hour. Set them in front of the fire to rise. Bake in a quick oven for half an hour.

Spiced buns—rub half a pound of butter into two pounds of flour, and a half a pound of sugar and a quarter of an ounce of cinnamon and mace. Beat two eggs in a place of warm milk. Pour this over two ounces of flour, which has been mixed with a tablespoonful of brown sugar. Make a hole in the flour, pour in the yeast and knead to light dough. Set aside in a warm place for an hour.

When risen add a quarter of a pound of currants, shape into buns, mark with a cross, and put in buttered tins. Bake in a quick oven for twenty minutes.

Delicious kind. To be gushing is reserved for the schoolboy or the paragon, but the person of refinement of feeling stops short of anything near that stage of expression.
It is, perhaps, a pity that we have not more time for the small courtesies of life, but even the most casual of us cannot afford to bear the accusation of indifference; for indifference is deadly and that it comes to be an exchange of courtesies, than to chase round and round in circles, until one is so exhausted that it comes to be a wonder what it is all about. When all is said and done, it is the little things that count, and which in the end bring the rewards most coveted.

Six weeks prices have been advanced from 7 cents a pound to 10 cents, costing the consumers $15,000,000 a year—and a price of 20 cents is expected unless the price boosting is checked.

Oil seeps, large and small, occur throughout Persia and Mesopotamia. Asphalt played an important part in the enduring civilization of the builders of the ancient world. One of the most remarkable instances of the use of asphalt or bitumen is the Arch of Ctesiphon on the River Tigris, about thirty miles to the south of Baghdad. This arch was built by Chosroes, one of the Sassanian kings, about the year 550 A. D., and of this famous structure two wings are still standing. It is built of brick and bitumen, and the original structure consisted of a large hall 163 feet long and 86 feet wide with a vaulted roof 95 feet high open at one end and closed at the other (also vaulted). The arch is 23 feet thick, and the wall supporting it 23 feet across at the base. The open end of the hall was flanked by two wing walls, rising to the height of the top of the arch and some 20 feet thick at the base.

The whole is built of large, flat, burnt bricks, some of them bearing a cuneiform stamp. The Ctesiphon arch gradually, and the archway remains the largest barrel vault in the world, and a valuable evidence as to the value of bitumen used in cement mortar.

American Explorers Helped.
The British occupation of Palestine to the present time has proved of greater usefulness to American explorers than to those of the mandate. The work of the American explorers has been to discover the ruins of the period of Herod, and earlier remains down to that period in the history when Ahab first established on that site the capital of Israel.

While British universities have been slow to respond to the great opportunity which has opened, there is, at any rate, much satisfaction to be derived from the increasing activity on the part of American explorers. Harmony and enthusiasm among the two other American universities, and the recently revealed that established is a healthy and helpful stimulus.
